SKETCH NOTES

GRAMMAR SKETCH NOTES

TEACHING NOTES:

It is best to guide students with a projected version of the page. As you model the note-taking process, students will complete their notes.

Begin by writing the general information about relative pronouns around the title of the doodle notes.

Proceed with the three brackets that explain usage (people, both, things).

Once the general usage is covered, move on to each of the relative pronouns. Each relative pronoun on the note page has room for an explanation of usage and an example.

"That" and "which" are the only two relative pronouns dependent on whether a clause is restrictive or nonrestrictive. It's important to point out that "whose" can be used with both restrictive and nonrestrictive clauses.
